The aim of The Glade 70 Metre Internet League is to develop a form of competitive archery where clubs and groups of archery friends can shoot together in a relaxed atmosphere, at a pace they like, so as to produce their very best performance.

The Glade 70 Metre Internet League is designed to be smart but casual. There is no stipulation as to when or where the six rounds are to be shot: an individual or team is quite at liberty to [attempt to] shoot all six or even 18 rounds in a 24 hour period. Two archers can be shooting their sixth and final rounds with an archer who is shooting their first round. Three archers from the same team are at liberty to shoot together on the same target. A club may decide to shoot the league round on the second Sunday of the month, or two friends may phone each other and say: "It's a nice day, let's go down to the club and shoot a Glade League round now". Scores from tournaments can be used. Exactly how shooting is organised is left to clubs & teams. However, the scoring must always be rigorous.

Club Teams can consist of any number of archers, and the league cloud software will calculate the various team aggregates and team of three positions. All archers in a club team must be formal members of a particular club: no ringers allowed. County, state, regional, national and other associations will be treated as a club. Club teams should have sensible names that reflect the name of the club.

Named Teams consist of ONLY three archers. Named team members do not have to be members of the same club, just three archers who wish to form a team. A named team may not change its makeup in a year and all members must shoot the same type of bow. Named teams are at liberty to adopt silly but non-offensive names.

FITA 70 Metre (720) Round: 6 Dozen arrows at 70m, 122cm face, 10 zone scoring.

Individual Competition: the best three scores (from a maximum of six) are added together and ranked.

Team Competition: three archers each shoot six 70 Metre rounds, a total of 18 scores.
